

We have officially posted our Texas summer intern positions, and we have decided on three different locations: Plano(Dallas), Austin, and Spring(Houston)! The links bellow link directly to the application pages for each.

A little bit about our internship program –

- It is a paid, full time internship that spans the entire summer
- They will start with training in Houston on basics of the industry and our vendors, along with at least one tour of a growing operation (we have done Tree Town in the past)
- It is a progressive internship that starts with them learning the basics in operations and continues with them growing through the outside sales training with face to face meetings with large customers!
- The internship ends with them attending the TNLA convention in August, working the booth, and presenting an “end of the internship” presentation, which professors are totally invited to!

I am personally the head of our internship program for our Texas region, so I am over them, but at the branches, they have a branch manager, and then each student will have a mentor that they will see every day at their branches! We do have weekly "homework" for them to complete, but nothing that they wouldn't be able to do at work, and we have quizzes and tests, making this internship meet the qualifications that most universities have for internship that the student is trying to use for class credit, but we will also work with each student if the university requires more than they are already doing!

If they'd like more information about our company and working for SiteOne, are interested in any full time positions, or would like to explore internships in other states, please have them visit this link ☺ <https://careers.siteone.com/> (they can also get to the internships by going to this homepage, and searching keywords like 'TX', 'Houston', or 'internship')

Let me know if y'all have any questions !
